

FOURTH CHARACTER

ESTHER (THE BOOK OF ESTHER)

In a faraway kingdom called Persia, there was a girl named Esther. She was young and beautiful, and she was Jewish. She was also a kind girl. Esther didn't have parents, but her cousin Mordecai took care of her and taught her everything she needed to know.

One day, the queen of Persia made the king very angry, so he needed to find a new queen. He asked all the young and beautiful girls in the kingdom to come to the palace. They had special treatment for a whole year, and then the king chose Esther to be the new queen.

There was a mean man named Haman who wanted to hurt Esther's people, the Jews. He plotted to kill them all. Esther was very brave and asked the king to help her save them. With God's help, Esther had the wisdom and courage to stop Haman's plan and save her people. (Esther 4 vs 15-16). Even though she was just a young girl without parents, God used her to do something amazing and protect her people. Because of Esther, a whole generation of Jews was kept from being wiped out Just like Esther, God can use anyone, no matter who they are or where they come from, to do great things.
